

Mixonium Assignment

Due: November 7, 2016, 9:00 a.m.

IMovie: Interview an elder (50 years old or older) Using open ended questions learn more about your family history, traditions and rituals.

Length: 7 minutes, edited

Google My Maps: Chart significant (mobility, emotional, political) geographical locations for You and Your elder. Minimum 3 locations for each of you up to a Maximum of 10 locations each.

Social Mobility Paper: Three pages, 12 point font, double spaced. Integrate at least three course sources using ASA style citation format,

Describe Social mobility in your family over time from one class to another. Social mobility can be up or down and can be either intergenerational (occurring between generations, such as when a child rises above the class of his or her parents) or intragenerational (occurring within a generation, such as when an individual changes class because of business success). Societies differ in the extent to which social mobility is permitted. Some societies are based on closed class systems in which movement from one class to another is nearly impossible. In a caste system, for example, mobility is strictly limited by the circumstances of one's birth. At the other extreme are open class systems in which class system placement is based on individual achievement rather than ascription.

Media Example: Length, 3 minutes

Find a media segment that reflects an aspect of your family (commercial, music video, movie segment, television show)

Slide Show: PowerPoint or Prezi, develop a slide show of family events, traditions or rituals - at least 7 slides, no more than 12 slides total.

Expert Clip: Length 7 Minutes maximum, upload a section of a Tedtalk or professional interview with an "expert" discussing an aspect of your family life.

Reflection/ Course Reading Review Paper: Instructions: 3 pages, double spaced, 12 point font, ASA style citation format. Title Page. Only use CEF articles and M&F sources.

Describe one perspective on why families are changing and reflect on how your family reflects or doesn't reflect that perspective.
